2. Compare and contrast the powers of the Senedd with those of the UK Parliament. If you think the balance of power between the two should be adjusted, explain how and why.

[100%]

3. ‘The European Convention on Human Rights is by far the most effective international instrument currently in force for the protection of human rights.’

   Discuss the above statement, providing facts and detailed reasons in your answer.

[100%]

4. ‘Constitutional law provides no effective limits on the leader of a political party which holds a simple majority of seats in the House of Commons.’

   Discuss the extent to which the above statement is or is not correct.

[100%]

5. Section 8 of the (fictitious) Public Order Act 2026 (POA 2026) allows the Home Secretary to issue regulations that can limit protests deemed likely to cause “serious disturbance to public peace, government operations, or critical infrastructure.” The Home Secretary issues a regulation (‘the regulation’) which imposes a total ban on all protests within 2 miles of any government building in central London for the next 18 months. The maximum penalty for violating the regulation is a £10,000 fine and/or 2 years imprisonment.

The regulation impacts an ongoing protest by Lara, who has been protesting peacefully every evening near the Houses of Parliament. The Public Rights Party (PRP), a small party in opposition to the Government, held a protest yesterday in defiance of the order and several of its members and local councillors were subsequently arrested and charged.

Lara and the PRP approach you for advice on whether to apply for judicial review. Advise them on whether they can apply, on what grounds they might apply, and what remedies – if any – might be awarded.
